

Script Analysis Service

The Praxis Script Analysis Service was designed in response to the increasing demand by writers to obtain feedback that enables them to improve their work by giving them a written critique by one of our professional readers before they submit their work to producers or funders.

We accept material for television, features, documentaries, and shorts in most stages of development, including treatments and outlines. The time frame for return is approximately 4 weeks from the time we receive your project.

Each reader's report is provided by one of our professional readers. Reports are approximately 4 - 6 pages long (for feature-length submissions). All our readers have experience with funding agencies and/or production companies, and most are screenwriters themselves.

Please keep in mind that this is a professional service provided by professional readers. To ensure that you get the most out of your report, ensure that the script is properly formatted, and proofread before sending it to us. Although it is not required, we would also suggest registering your script through the Writers Guild of Canada (www.wgc.ca/script_reg/index.html). Scripts will not be returned.

Each reader's report remains confidential, seen only by the Director and the Assistant to the Director at Praxis. Reports are not be seen by development personnel.
